Dear Governor Carter:

It has been a pleasure serving on your transition team. I like to think that our work was helpful to Harold and Charles as they prepared to take over Defense: I know we all feel a sense of pride in being part of the effort.

I congratulate you on your Defense choices. You did a favor to each member of the team in selecting his partner. It is working.

I regret deeply that I cannot now stay to be a full-time part of your Administration. I hope that someday I will be given another chance. In the meantime, I will try to be helpful in any way asked and have even discussed some ideas with Zbig and Jack.

I thank you for your role in making this transition period a challenge and a pleasure for me. I wish you the best of luck.

FROM: Frank Moore FM
DATE: January 27, 1977

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Senator Eastland, Senators Baker and Birch Bayh are counting the Senate this afternoon on Judge Bell. I have Dan Tate working through Bayh on this. I do not want the President's Congressional Liaison people to have any profile at all. The Hill people will think we are in trouble on it. Eastland thinks Bell will get 30 votes against him. I think 15, but we'll have a more definitive count late tonight.

Don Riegle would definitely vote against Bell and wants you to know that he has changed his mind since he last talked with you.

Kelly will write a letter to Judge Bell requesting retirement January 1, 1978. The press will ask Judge Bell-- he will say that it was at Kelly's request, that he has not asked him to resign as he has no authority to do so nor has he given him a commitment to stay.

FROM: HAMILTON JORDAN HJ
DATE: JANUARY 25, 1977
SUBJECT: UNDER SECRETARY OF DEPARTMENT OF
HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Pat Harris is doing a thorough and careful job of selecting her sub-cabinet appointees. Attached is her Memorandum to you requesting that you call John Burnett to ask him if he will serve as her Under Secretary.

Landon tells me that Burnett is highly qualified for the position. He says that Mrs. Harris is aware that there may be mild criticism of Burnett because he served in the New York State Urban Development Corporation during the time when that organization suffered severe financial problems, and because Burnett is currently Executive Vice President of the Rockefeller Center Management Corporation.

Getting the right Under Secretary will be important to Pat, and I recommend that you make the call for her.

P.S. Pete Flaherty has decided to pursue a political career in Pennsylvania and withdraw his name from consideration for #2 at HUD.

P.S.S. Pat has really impressed me in the deliberate and careful way she has proceeded.

MEMORANDUM TO: The President

FROM: Patricia Roberts Harris Patricia Roberts Harris

Re: Recommended Appointment of John Burnett as Under Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development

I have examined the resumes and recommendations of several persons suggested by the transition team and others for the position of Under Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Among these persons are John Burnett of New York City, Manuel Aragon of Los Angeles, John Zucotti of New York City, Robert Embry of Baltimore, Pete Flaherty of Pittsburg, Anthony Downs of Chicago and William White of Massachusetts.

During the past two weeks I have met with over forty interest groups and canvassed a wide range of individuals. On the basis of these interviews, I strongly recommend the appointment of John Burnett as Under Secretary of HUD. Burnett has been warmly recommended by every person and group with whom his name has been discussed.

In our meeting he and I quickly developed a rapport that made it clear that we would work well together.

Burnett is a graduate of Princeton and the Yale Law School, and served as law clerk to Mr. Justice Douglas. He was General Counsel of AID in the sixties, and served as Executive Vice President, Resources for the Future (which was headed by David Lilienthal who holds Burnett in the highest regard). He was successively General Counsel, Executive Vice President and President of the New York State Urban Development Corporation. He is now Executive Vice President, Rockefeller Center Management Corporation.

I am imposing upon your time and requesting that you ask Burnett to accept this position because I know directly from David Rockefeller, on whose personal real estate projects he is currently working, that he is valued highly by Rockefeller Center Management Corporation. I believe that only your request has any chance of persuading him to accept the appointment.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

January 27, 1977

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT
FROM: BOB LIPSHUTZ BL
SUBJECT: Presidential Approval of
CAB Decisions

Background

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) has authority to structure commercial air routes within this country and to grant overseas routes to domestic carriers (assuming, of course, that the foreign nation in question has agreed to accord access rights to American carriers). This structuring is normally accomplished through issuance of "certificates" which specify the routes which carriers may fly. If the CAB issues a certificate to a domestic carrier covering domestic routes, the President has no role, although the CAB's decision can be reviewed by the courts.

Congress has provided, however, that the President must approve any issuance or modification of a certificate to a domestic carrier flying foreign routes, as well as all certificates issued permitting foreign carriers to fly in this country. The rationale for requiring Presidential approval is that issuance of certificates in these situations may involve considerations of foreign policy or defense for which the President has ultimate responsibility.

The statute explicitly provides that courts may not review the President's decision to approve or disapprove CAB action respecting a foreign carrier. The Supreme Court ruled in 1948, moreover, that judicial review is also precluded when the President approves or disapproves a CAB decision concerning overseas routes for a domestic carrier; the Court reasoned that the President's action may be based on foreign policy considerations which the judiciary is not competent to address.

It is this latter category of cases -- Presidential review of CAB decisions granting certificates to domestic carriers for foreign routes -- which has historically posed the most troubling problems for the President. The prospect of lucrative foreign routes, coupled with the lack of judicial review, has produced a lobbying free-for-all as disappointed carriers have sought Presidential reversal of adverse CAB decisions.

In order to regularize the process by which the President reviews CAB decisions subject to his approval, the White House Counsel's Office and the Office of Legal Counsel at Justice prepared an Executive Order which was issued by President Ford as E.O. 11920 in June 1976. Among other things, the order prohibits individuals within the Executive Office from discussing pending CAB matters with interested parties. The order also permits the President, in routine cases, to state that his approval of a CAB decision involving overseas routes for domestic carriers is not based on foreign policy or defense considerations, thereby making available judicial review. 1/

Seems Good.

Current Issues

The desirability of retaining Presidential approval over CAB grants of foreign routes to domestic carriers is a matter of Congressional debate. Senator Cannon and others will, as part of a general aviation reform package, introduce legislation removing this authority from the President. 2/ We have yet to take a position on this issue. In the meantime, the CAB continues to act on overseas route requests, and its actions have triggered two problems:

1. Judicial Review Under New Executive Order

Under the new Executive Order, the President properly has no objection to judicial review in those cases where he explicitly states that his approval of a CAB decision is not based on foreign policy or defense considerations. On at least one occasion, however, President Ford approved a CAB certificate issuance without stating whether or not foreign policy played any role in his determination. The case involved Northwest Airlines, among others, and in fact foreign policy was a factor.

1/ The order presumes that disapproval of CAB actions is predicated on foreign policy or defense factors; hence there will not be court review of such decisions.

2/ The overall package will probably be passed by Congress this summer.

Northwest has attempted to secure judicial review of Ford's decision. Justice wishes to argue that the absence of foreign policy considerations may not be inferred from the President's silence; since those considerations may have been present, review by the court is not appropriate. We agreed and directed Justice to proceed in this fashion. ok

In the future, this problem can easily be avoided if every Presidential approval of CAB grants of foreign routes to domestic carriers contains an explicit statement as to whether the approval is based on foreign or defense policy. ok

2. CAB's Use of Exemptions to Avoid Presidential Review

Under the law, Presidential approval is required for issuance or modification of certificates. The CAB may also issue "exemptions" -- which are technically not modifications in a carrier's certificate -- granting temporary authority for a domestic carrier to fly a foreign route. Such authority may last for as long as one or two years.

The CAB has taken the position that grants of exemptions giving domestic carriers foreign routes are not subject to Presidential review. The Ford Administration disagreed. The courts have tended to side with the CAB on this question, although there has been no definitive resolution.

National Airlines has requested an exemption permitting it to fly from Miami to Paris for one year. Justice, which along with other agencies (e.g., DOT, State) routinely comments on such requests, supports National on the merits but wishes to state that the CAB's decision should be submitted to the President for approval. Assuming that the underlying rationale for Presidential review is still sound, Justice's position is logically consistent, since there is often little practical difference between issuance of a certificate and grant of an exemption.

Because the Administration has not yet decided whether to abandon the concept of Presidential approval, we directed Justice to make its argument that any exemption given National should be presented to the President for review -- but to argue in a low key fashion, so that we are not precluded from taking another position at a later date.

I agree

January 27, 1977

MEMORANDUM FOR:

THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

STU EIZENSTAT Stu

SUBJECT:

Bob Lipshutz Memorandum On Presidential
Approval of CAB Decisions

In responding to Bob's memorandum I have consulted with my staff and this memo represents our consensus.

I. Question: What position should the Administration take on Senator Cannon's legislation to remove Presidential authority over CAB grants of foreign routes to domestic carriers?

A. Advantages of supporting legislation:

1. These decisions by the President rarely win him any friends and frequently alienate not only particular carriers who lose routes but whole regions of the country.

2. Traditionally the President's decisions on such route cases are made on the basis of bald political judgments, after the CAB has taken into account the factual, non-political reasons why a particular route should be granted.

B. Disadvantages of supporting legislation:

1. The State Department feels that such authority is an important Presidential tool in foreign policy.

2. If the situation is not handled properly, the President may appear to be voluntarily relinquishing Presidential authority and therefore may appear to be "weak."

C. Conclusion:

We could structure the legislation so that the President could overturn a decision only upon foreign policy grounds. In addition, we could suggest legislation which would preclude any contact between the President and affected carriers. With such changes the political heat would be removed from the President's desk, but the President would retain authority over foreign policy implications.

ok to make public any contact with any official in executive branch.

*My inclination will be to retain Presidential authority - unless I voluntarily
initiate a change.
I trust myself
more than I do
Congress to be objective &
non-political.*

best approach - let me see details -

Alternatively we could incorporate these provisions in a new executive order and I would be glad to have my staff undertake such action.

Since hearings on this issue will not be held until March, it is not necessary to take a position at this time on this provision of the Cannon legislation.

II. Question: Should the Justice Department continue to argue that any exemption from the certificate requirement for foreign routes be presented to the President for review?

The great weight of legal authority is that these exemptions granted by the CAB are not certificate grants and therefore should not be presented to the President for review. This apparently is the CAB position.

However, since an exemption from the certificate requirement is the same as a certificate grant, it should be subject to Presidential review as long as the law gives the President review authority.

My inclination is ^{toward} competition & less more regulation.

I basically concur with the discussion in Bob's memorandum. I do not, however, think that this is a subject which requires the President's attention at this time. Jerry Doolittle has prepared these suggested jokes for your 2 or 3 minute comments.

Senator Byrd has given me a mighty tough act to follow. I never did learn to play a musical instrument, although I must confess that on many occasions I have felt music in my heart.

I'm particularly pleased to be here with eight other new boys in school. I've been a new boy often enough since, but the first time was when I was a plebe at Annapolis. I can't say how they do it now, but in those days the upperclassmen used big wooden paddles to teach new boys their place. I've noticed that here in Washington they have a different system. They make you watch while they paddle Judge Bell.

Another thing the nine of us have in common is that we're all fuzzy on the issues. You can tell that because we all got elected.

Of course it's different in a Presidential campaign than it is running for the House and the Senate. A Presidential candidate has a much broader range of issues to evade.

Naturally that means you need a much bigger staff, too. Our issues people filled most of a floor down in Atlanta. I couldn't say just which floor. I'd ask, but I never could get a direct answer out of them.

Whatever floor it was, though, these were men superbly qualified for their posts. Men with the character and integrity to come down unequivocally on both sides of any question at all. Generally, in fact, they were able to do even better than that. These were men wise enough and mature enough to know that there are many more than two sides to every question.

REPRODUCED BY THE WHITE HOUSE
FOR THE PRESIDENT

One man in particular comes to mind. We had had a query from one of the big national magazines. Not Playboy. I think it may have been Better Homes and Gardens. Anyway, they were conducting some sort of survey, and they wanted to find out what was Jimmy Carter's favorite color.

Well, the whole issues staff kicked that one around for a day or two, and nobody could seem to get the answer just right.

And then this particular fellow hit on it, and everybody else wondered why they hadn't thought of it all along. The answer, of course, was this:

"Jimmy Carter's favorite color is the same as yours."

I was so impressed with that man that I wanted to give him a top-level government job, something where we could use his fantastic ability to straddle. What I had in mind was something like State Department spokesman.

But we just couldn't get him past the FBI check. When he got to that part where they ask you on the form whether you are now or ever have been a member of the Communist Party, he was done in by his own natural instincts.

He checked both boxes.
